

Meet Your Advanced Practice Nurse

Jenny Hinegardner, APN/FNP-C

Why I became a Medical Provider

"I became interested in nursing when I was 19, while undergoing treatment for a cerebral aneurism. Right before beginning my nursing education, I worked in a primary care office that employed a nurse practitioner. That was when I set my goal to become a NP."

Master's of Science in Nursing

University of Illinois at Chicago

Bachelor's of Science in Nursing

MacMurray College, Jacksonville, Illinois

Organizations

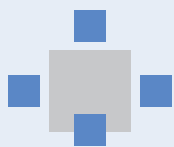

American Nurses Credentialing Center,
Dermatology Nurses' Association

Department of Dermatology

As an Advanced Practice Nurse in the Department of Dermatology Ms. Hinegardner helps with the diagnosis and medical treatment of skin diseases. She performs physical examinations, prescribes, interprets laboratory tests, and performs skin biopsies and surgery.

Ms. Hinegardner is very devoted to her family and centers her activities around her family, but also enjoys gardening, walks and art. She is married to Gary, and they have one son and two daughters together.

I hope to provide safe, evidenced based care to all my patients. I want each patient to feel valued and respected. I will listen to their concerns and do my best to explain their condition and treatment options to them; then support them on their healthcare journey.
