

Meet Your Dermatologist

Jeremy Youse, MD

If there is one thing that I have learned, it is that the needs of the patient come first. This simple fact is what guided my training for the past 5 years and will continue to be my approach to patient care for the rest of my career. Each patient has a unique story and background that factors into his or her disease and treatment options. I strive to learn a patient's story in addition to their disease so that I can offer the most appropriate treatment. My goal is not to treat skin cancer; my goal is to treat a person with skin cancer.

What Sets Me apart from Other Providers

"My experiences in childhood with severe psoriasis offered me unique insight into the emotional distress caused by skin disease. I think this allows me to treat the whole patient, not just their skin disease. My experience at Mayo Clinic offered me some of the best dermatologic training in the world. In a typical day, I would see a broad variety of patients with all sorts of skin conditions. From the local farmer for a routine skin check to the Fortune 500 executive with an extremely rare, aggressive, recurrent skin cancer to the Hollywood celebrity wanting a cosmetic procedure. I have been allowed to care for patients with the worst skin diseases that were referred from doctors around the world looking for expert second opinions."

In the Department of Dermatology, Dr. Youse treats patients with skin problems such as acne, rashes, hives, and skin tumors. He performs Mohs Micrographic Surgery for skin cancer removal. Mohs surgery is unique and so effective because of the way the removed tissue is microscopically examined, evaluating 100% of the surgical margins. This ensures complete cancer removal during surgery, virtually eliminating the chance of the cancer growing back and minimizing the amount of healthy tissue lost. Dr. Youse also has a special interest in laser and cosmetic procedures
